Description:

Review

Dangling Without a Rope is not just a collection of stories. It is the map of the very-unique journey of self-discovery and growth that Barbara Belmont has taken through life. ...This set this book above some of the other books of its type for me... That being said, the stories in Dangling Without a Rope are interesting, exciting, and well-told, with a good balance of action and introspection. -Khadijah Lacina/ Story Circle Book Reviews

About the Author Barbara "Bobbe" Belmont grew up on suburban Long Island. After graduating from a Catholic college in 1968, she chose a different path for her life: "While my peers were raising families and securing successful careers, I spent decades of my life in a world of outdoor challenge and excitement; single, curious about the planet, and totally mobile. One year I lived in 17 different dwellings. I also lived in vans, campers, trucks, cars, tents, yurts, huts, caves, and the out-of-doors. Often, the sum total of my belongings could fit in a VW Bug, sometimes a backpack. Between adventures I worked an absurd variety of jobs—chamber maid, salesgirl, au pair, gardener, grape and apple picker, ski teacher, coach, translator, florist, massage therapist, real estate agent, sled-dog racing consultant, kennel hand, secretary, switchboard operator, legislative assistant. When not earning a meager wage so that I could travel third class around the planet, I engaged in extreme sports. I climbed rock, mountains, and ice. I raced sled dogs, kayaked rivers and oceans, cycled alpine passes, piloted a hang-glider, flew an airplane, surfed, scuba dove... I competed every chance I got. I lived in a world of men. Women were simply not yet on the scene. My greatest challenges came later in life and not out in the wide world. They are long-term Lyme Disease, Breast Cancer, and Mild Traumatic Brain Injury. Boy, did they try to crimp my style! While my stories are aimed at everyone, adventurers and adventurers-at-heart, I hope that they will also bring entertainment and inspiration to my fellow Lyme sufferers and those dancing with cancer and brain injury."
